Sentencing in Hong Kong - Eighth Edition

Publication Date: June 2018

Authors: I Grenville Cross SBS, SC
Patrick WS Cheung
ISBN: 9789888476671
Student Price: $2,500
Format: Hardcover Book

The eighth edition of Sentencing in Hong Kong is a vital work of reference for anyone involved in criminal law. It examines all aspects of sentencing law and practice, and considers the effect of latest developments. At a time when sentencing issues have gripped the public's attention, the arrival of the eighth edition is timely. It will not only provide guidance for courts and legal professionals, but also enlightenment for the wider community.

Since the last edition, there have been significant changes to sentencing practice and procedure, as well as new guidelines for particular offences. These have included the quantum of the discount to be awarded after guilty pleas, the criteria applicable to the imposition of suspended sentences of imprisonment, and the way in which reviews of sentence are to be approached. A greater focus has also been placed on the effect of human rights considerations in sentencing in this edition. This is evidenced, for example, in our examination of life imprisonment, solitary confinement and binding over orders.

The Appendix has also been expanded, with new segments on fire safety, forgery, infanticide and loitering. Included among aggravating factors for the first time is child abuse, in light of some alarming trends, while among mitigating factors, given its topicality, is civil disobedience, and we consider the sentencing approach in each situation.

Author: Sarah E Hilmer
Published: 2010
ISBN: 9789888054459
Price: HK$ 950
Format: Softcover book

The objective of Mediation Theory and Practice in Hong Kong is firstly, to provide sufficient mediation theory; and secondly, to use the theory in context of local Hong Kong mediation practice.

The foundation of this book is the theory of mediation and the different stages of a mediation process; and will discuss each stage's importance and function. While the theory mainly reflects the parties' and mediator's perspectives, the practical part of the book mainly refers to the lawyers' involvement in a mediation process. References will be made to Practice Directions, relevant Civil Procedure Rules, relevant case law and necessary agreements relevant to a mediation process.

"The discussion of theory has general validity in all jurisdictions where mediation is taught and practiced. And the bridging of theory across to the structure of practice in Hong Kong serves both to elucidate the theory and to present the requirements of practice in a form which will be of great value to academics, practitioners and beyond."

Author: Marc Waha
Published: 2015
ISBN: 9789888300112

The Competition Ordinance (Cap 619) is the first competition law that applies to the entire economy of Hong Kong. Cap 619 prohibits anti-competitive agreements and abuse of a substantial degree of market power, as well as establishing an anti-trust merger control regime.

Similarities between Cap 619 and legislation in the UK, EU, Canada and Singapore exist, but the Ordinance considers the economic and social circumstances of Hong Kong. Practitioners and businesses need to prepare for the Competition Ordinance as it applies to any entity engaged in economic activity, including individuals. There are no grandfathering arrangements and contracts entered into before the commencement of Cap 619 will not be protected from the full effects of the Ordinance.

An expert in the field of competition, Marc Waha from Norton Rose Fulbright has contributed to and completely reviewed the annotations as General Editor. Sandra Marco Colino from the Chinese University of Hong Kong specialises in competition law and annotated parts of the Ordinance.

Ho & Hall's Hong Kong Contract Law - Fourth Edition

Author: Stephen Hall
Published: 2017
ISBN: 9789888389551
Price: HK$ 2,200
Format: Hardcover book

Ho & Hall's Hong Kong Contract Law, written by Stephen Hall, is a comprehensive work which expertly identifies the unique local characteristics of Hong Kong contract law. The text balances theoretical and policy discussion with practical considerations, including clear illustrative examples of the law at work.

Over the last approximately thirty years it is possible to discern an acceleration in the pace at which the common law in Hong Kong has been developing some distinctly local characteristics. The law of contract is no exception in this regard.

Undoubtedly, the approaching end of British sovereignty had much to do with this development during the earlier part of the 1990s when the second edition of this book appeared. Since the foundation of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, a principal impetus has been the work of the new Court of Final Appeal (CFA) which was established to replace the Privy Council as the highest court for the territory. The CFA was originally something of an experiment, but it is now possible to pronounce it a notable success. The localisation of Hong Kong's highest court has contributed, and will almost certainly continue to contribute, significantly to the emergence of a Hong Kong common law.

A consequence of these developments is the growing body of Hong Kong case law in traditional common law areas such as contract. This has been especially evident in the period since the end of British sovereignty. It is the author's hope that this fourth edition of Betty Ho's principal work on contract law can build on her legacy and make a contribution to the further emergence of a Hong Kong common law of contract.

Hong Kong Company Law: Cases, Materials and Comments

Authors: Philip St J Smart, Katherine Lynch, Anna YM Tam
Published: 1997
ISBN: 9780409998719
Price: HK$ 1,290
Format: Softcover book

This is the first text to offer the reader an in-depth analysis of the principles of Hong Kong company law coupled with a comprehensive collection of relevant case law from the Hong Kong courts. As Hong Kong company law no longer invariably tracks its English counterpart, this text has been written specifically to highlight key issues of Hong Kong company law and practice where the Companies Ordinance (Cap 32) has departed from the English model. Accordingly, this work will be particularly valuable to practitioners in Hong Kong.

The detailed text covers significant company law developments in Hong Kong including the Companies (Amendment) Ordinance 1997, which abolished the ultra vires doctrine and reformed the constructive notice rule. Important case law, such as the decision of the Hong Kong Court of Appeal in the Kishimoto case, is also highlighted. Additionally, the extensive use of foreign companies in Hong Kong practice is reflected in the text, with a critical analysis of the important decisions in Re China Tianjin Economic and Technical Co-operative Corp and Elsinct (Asia-Pacific) Ltd v Commercial Bank of Korea Ltd.

This book represents a major contribution to the literature on Hong Kong company law and will be welcomed by legal practitioners and company administrators, as well as those studying for degree or professional examinations.

Published: 2018
ISBN: 9789888476428
Price: HK$1,800
Format: Softcover book

The Hong Kong Credit and Security Manual (formerly known as Commercial Law in Hong Kong) has been re-structured as a Manual. This is to facilitate those drafting commercial documents to provide all background information in a systematic order. This Manual covers a number of specific landmark cases relating to illegality (Patel v Mirza [2016]), liquidated damages/penalty (Cavendish Square v El Makdessi [2016]; Paciocco v ANZ Banking Group [2016]), estoppel and constructive trusts (Lee Yuk Shing v Dianoor [2016]) and interpretation and implied terms (Re the Will of the Late Nina Kung [2016]; Wood v Capita [2017]; Arnold v Britton [2016]). In Re the Will of the Late Nina Kung [2016], the Court of Final Appeal adopted a new approach that a court cannot consider the implication of terms without considering interpretation first.

Key legislative amendments have also been reflected in this new edition including, amongst others, s. 127 to 129, 334 and 335 of the Companies Ordinance (Cap 622) and winding-up and preferences on insolvency in Companies (Winding Up and Miscellaneous Provisions) Ordinance (Cap 32).

Wang's Business Law Of China - Fourth Edition

Author: Guiguo Wang
Published: 2003
ISBN: 9789628105953
Price: HK$ 1,350
Format: Hardcover book

Wang's Business Law of China, the first work of its kind on Chinese commercial law, is a detailed, analytical, comprehensive and practical account of the subject. It examines and discusses how Chinese laws are made, why they are made, how they are interpreted and enforced, and their effects on the development of the market economy in China as well as on foreign businesses doing transactions with their Chinese counterparts or making investments in China.

Since the first edition, and indeed since the previous edition, many changes have taken place in China which have impacted on commercial law. Changes have resulted both from domestic reforms and China's integration into the world economy. Domestically, the legal system has been reformed by the adoption of the Legislative Law, provided powers at various levels of government and created procedures for making laws, national and local. This is covered in detail. Globally, China's accession to the WTO in November 2001 has made broader trading rights into a reality. For more than half of a century after the establishment of the People's Republic of China, individuals and enterprises were not entitled to conduct foreign trade. The fourth edition incorporates all the developments brought about by WTO obligations, comprising numerous laws and regulations in connection with trade in goods, trade in services, foreign investment, intellectual property protection, antidumping, subsidies and countervailing duties, safeguards and taxation.

This book is designed to meet the needs of the legal academic, the practitioner and business person interested in or doing business with or in China. It is also particularly suitable for law students studying Chinese civil and commercial law and law on international business transactions.

Since the last edition, there have been significant changes to sentencing practice and procedure, as well as new guidelines for particular offences. These have included the quantum of the discount to be awarded after guilty pleas, the criteria applicable to the imposition of suspended sentences of imprisonment, and the way in which reviews of sentence are to be approached. A greater focus has also been placed on the effect of human rights considerations in sentencing in this edition. This is evidenced, for example, in our examination of life imprisonment, solitary confinement and binding over orders.

The Appendix has also been expanded, with new segments on fire safety, forgery, infanticide and loitering. Included among aggravating factors for the first time is child abuse, in light of some alarming trends, while among mitigating factors, given its topicality, is civil disobedience, and we consider the sentencing approach in each situation.

In common with many jurisdictions around the world, Hong Kong has seen growth in the number of family law petitions filed with the courts. Family law is increasingly becoming an area where clients are best served by specialist practitioners and judges. Cultural imperatives have given rise to a marked deviation between Hong Kong and English case authorities, resulting in family law in Hong Kong no longer being a mirror of the law in England. Although overseas cases are still frequently relied upon in submissions, it is apparent that reliance upon Hong Kong cases is becoming imperative.

Few Hong Kong family law judgments make it to the general law reports. The result has been that practitioners are denied the ability to arm themselves with the relevant authorities. This lack of resources has not only impeded practitioners but had a direct impact on service levels to litigants. The Hong Kong Family Law Reports address this gap. This comprehensive collection of judgments offers evidence of the intellectual arguments surrounding judicial discretion in the full spectrum of family law cases. The Hong Kong Family Law Reports is intended to support the consistency and continuing development of this important area of the law and is an essential reference for practitioners and academics alike.

As before, this book incorporates relevant decisions and comment from other jurisdictions. We hope that this book will assist the practitioner in being alert to current and impending responsibility issues when asked for advice and assistance. We hope that it will assist practitioners in understanding and maintaining the high standards of conduct that the Hong Kong legal profession expects of its members.

Cyberlaw in Hong Kong - Third Edition

Authors: Paul Stephenson, Alisa Kwan
Published: 2014
ISBN: 9789888359646
Price: HK$ 1,400
Format: Softcover book

Cyberlaw in Hong Kong is essential reading not only for lawyers, but anyone connected with the web. The third edition of this popular title includes updates to the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance (Cap 486), with the chapter completely rewritten and includes a chart setting out the complex criminal regime that has been implemented. The Ordinance regulates the sale of personal data in direct marketing, creates a new offence for disclosing personal data without consent and imposes heavier penalties. A discussion on the landmark decision of Shi Tao v Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data is also extensively discussed, among other cases. This book also includes the modifications to the Copyright Ordinance (Cap 528) and the largely amended Trade Descriptions Ordinance (Cap 362) that affects advertising law on the internet.

Defamation is another area of law that has seen an influx of cases in relation to the internet, especially in the UK, where the courts are recognising that messages on the internet are much more likely to 'go viral' than those sent through traditional media. There are also developments in the UK relating to the contentious area of 'metatags' and their relationship with trade mark law that are dealt with in this book, as those decisions will have great influence in Hong Kong. Cyberlaw also looks at China and the internet with the first-to-file principle of the trade mark law now overhauled. It also takes into account cybersquatting and how the courts are prepared to deal with the matter, even from foreign companies.

Intellectual Property in Hong Kong

Authors: Michael D Pendleton, Alice Lee
Published: 2007
ISBN: 9789628972296
Price: HK$ 580
Format: Softcover book

Unlike most of Asia, the Hong Kong SAR has as long a history and immersion in intellectual property as any country of Western Europe or the United States. This, of course, is due to the influence of the United Kingdom during its period as coloniser. As a result, Hong Kong's intellectual property laws are rich and diverse as well as being heavily biased in favour of the right holder. Indeed Hong Kong, which is a member (the only non-sovereign state member) of the World Trade Organisation (WTO), was the first member of the WTO to seek TRIPs compliance for its intellectual property laws. In addition to the complexity of its intellectual property statute law, the judge made law, ie. the common law of IP, is equally rich and diverse. The mix of judges both local and expatriate has resulted in a highly comparative approach to intellectual property law, and one that is accessible as it is in the English language.

There is a need in Hong Kong for a concise but critical analysis of intellectual property law and this book aims to fulfill this need.

International and Comparative Intellectual Property: Law, Policy and Practice (Bilingual Edition)

Author: Li Yahong
Published: 2005
ISBN: 9789628855117
Price: HK$ 460
Format: Softcover book

The book introduces the major multilateral IP conventions/agreements such as TRIPs, the international IP bodies such as WIPO, the regional and bilateral agreements such as various EU Directives, and examines how various forms of intellectual property operate within the international framework and at national level.

The book also discusses the international enforcement measures and TRIPs dispute resolution mechanisms, including discussion on the most updated cases.

While devoting special attention to IPRs protection for cutting edge technologies such as biotechnology and information technology, the book also addresses the importance of protection for indigenous resources such as biodiversity, traditional knowledge and folklore, and the overall implications for global competition between the developed and the developing countries.

The book closes with a summary of the post-TRIPs development of the international intellectual property system.

ISBN: 9789888231607
Price: HK$ 990
Format: Softcover book

Hong Kong Tort Law: Texts, Cases and Ordinances engages its readers in the effective learning of the principles of tort law. This work considers the impact of case law from the US as well as common law jurisdictions such as the UK, Australia and Hong Kong. This work also introduces the reader to the subject from a social and policy-oriented context.

Throughout the text, questions of practical importance are raised to encourage critical thinking and to train the reader in the application of tort law. This book is the first in Hong Kong to incorporate 'discovery-based innovative teaching pedagogy' and utilises critical thinking exercises that stimulate active discussion and the consideration of real-world issues.

Case studies, explanations of principle-making and the exposition of recent case law further ensure that readers are clear about the current position of the law. Each chapter illustrates how ordinances are connected in the Hong Kong tort law system.

The Law of Tort in Hong Kong - Third Edition

Authors: DK Srivastava, Anna Lui, Charu Sharma, Sara Tsui
Published: 2014
ISBN: 9789888231591
Price: HK$ 2,000
Format: Softcover book

The Law of Tort in Hong Kong, first edition, was one of the first local textbooks on tort law. Now in its third edition, it still offers a unique local perspective on tort law, separate to the English common law, as referring to laws of England does not always offer answers to problems unique to Hong Kong. This book aims to explain the legal principles of the law of tort through the lens of and with particular reference to Hong Kong cases and legislation. Leading cases on the law of tort are analysed and relevant legislation examined. The authors also discuss Hong Kong socioeconomic developments and suggest options for law reform. Distinctive of other works from England or elsewhere in the Commonwealth, this book focuses on typical Hong Kong problems such as nuisance, trespass, occupiers' and owners' liability and liability of bank and financial advisers. This core text is of value and interest to lawyers, law lecturers and students.

The Law of Unjust Enrichment in Hong Kong

Author: Clemence Yeung
Published: 2008
ISBN: 9789628972265
Price: HK$ 1,350
Format: Hardcover book

The law of unjust enrichment is the least known and understood area of the law of obligations. The subject has in the last two decades attracted immense attention in England where there have been very many significant developments, both in terms of the seminal judgments which have emerged and the continued exploration of, for instance, the juridical basis of the concept of unjust enrichment on the academic front. There is also the difficult problem of proprietary restitution which has taxed both the courts and the commentators.

The present book considers both the Hong Kong and English case law, and draws upon academic discussions as to its interpretation. It contains, in the chapter on Historical Introduction, a helpful description of the legal history relating to the money counts, a good grasp of that history being essential to understanding the present law. It also considers the influence of civil law, which has been considerable and is not to be overlooked. Civilian learning had caused one of the most distinguished and important writers on the law of unjust enrichment to recant much of his earlier thinking on the subject, although thus far the case law has continued to progress using the recanted model which he had advocated.
